A Blazer basketball milestone,
January 6, 2016:
CSB basketball beats Mac in OT, picks up 500th MIAC win
Another Blazer basketball milestone:
CSB welcomes a new Athletic Director,
Glennis Werner ‘93

High school graduation photo from the 1989-1990 Student Directory
1990 team photo from 1990 Saints p. 121
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/SJUArchives/id/44124)
1990 team photo from 1990 Saints p. 121
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/SJUArchives/id/44124
Inset: 1990 Saints yearbook p. 179
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/SJUArchives/id/44182
1991 team photo from the CSB Archives
(Another version is in the 1991 Saints yearbook, p. 51
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/SJUArchives/id/43494)
1991-92 Blazers

Photo in the CSB Archives O:\Archives\csbarchives\Athletics\Athletics Scans\Basketball- in O drive\Team Pictures\BBALL 199101992 TP2.pdf
Junior class leads the basketball team

by Kathleen Smith
Independent sports editor

The College of St. Benedict's head basketball coach Mike Durbin will have to change his motto, 'you're only as good as your senior class' to 'you're only as good as your junior class.'

The Blazer basketball team has no seniors returning to action this year. Durbin is looking to his six returning juniors to step forward and take on the leadership of the team.

The returning Blazer seniors are juniors: Kelly Mahlum, Janine Mettling, Sue Yorkovich, Lynn Nielsen, Amy Hergot and Glennis Werner.

"Twenty players has always been our goal, but this is the first time I have had twenty on the roster," Durbin said. "The Blazer record last year was 20-7 overall, 14-6 MAC. That was the fourth consecutive year the Blazers have tallied 20 or more wins. The Blazers also made it to the semi-finals of the NCAA Regional tournament. Only two starters were lost to graduation.

Durbin has had to change some of his coaching methods due to the loss of a post up player. The team will focus more on the wing positions, one of them being Kelly Mahlum, the third leading scorer last year.

The Blazer basketball team has no seniors returning to action this year. Durbin is looking to his six returning seniors to step forward and take on the leadership of the team.

The returning Blazer seniors are juniors: Kelly Mahlum, Janine Mettling, Sue Yorkovich, Lynn Nielsen, Amy Hergot and Glennis Werner.

"We practice all year and a lot of times we get together on our own. We are a real young team but we have a lot of experience," Nielsen said. "Practices are going really well. They are a lot different than last year. We'll be running a lot more this season," Mahlum said. "The team will be able to put their practices to use when they scrimmage Anoka Ramsey on Nov. 13. The first and second year athletes will play in a program and will all have plenty of playing time," Durbin said.

"We're playing a lot more this season. We've been working on a lot more this season," Nielsen said. "The team is going to be a lot better this year. We're going to be a lot more experienced," Mahlum said. "The team will be able to put their practices to use when they scrimmage Anoka Ramsey on Nov. 13. The first and second year athletes will play in a program and will all have plenty of playing time," Durbin said.

"We practice all year and a lot of times we get together on our own. We are a real young team but we have a lot of experience," Nielsen said. "Practices are going really well. They are a lot different than last year. We'll be running a lot more this season," Mahlum said. "The team will be able to put their practices to use when they scrimmage Anoka Ramsey on Nov. 13. The first and second year athletes will play in a program and will all have plenty of playing time," Durbin said.

"We're playing a lot more this season. We've been working on a lot more this season," Nielsen said. "The team is going to be a lot better this year. We're going to be a lot more experienced," Mahlum said. "The team will be able to put their practices to use when they scrimmage Anoka Ramsey on Nov. 13. The first and second year athletes will play in a program and will all have plenty of playing time," Durbin said.

"We're playing a lot more this season. We've been working on a lot more this season," Nielsen said. "The team is going to be a lot better this year. We're going to be a lot more experienced," Mahlum said. "The team will be able to put their practices to use when they scrimmage Anoka Ramsey on Nov. 13. The first and second year athletes will play in a program and will all have plenty of playing time," Durbin said.

"We're playing a lot more this season. We've been working on a lot more this season," Nielsen said. "The team is going to be a lot better this year. We're going to be a lot more experienced," Mahlum said. "The team will be able to put their practices to use when they scrimmage Anoka Ramsey on Nov. 13. The first and second year athletes will play in a program and will all have plenty of playing time," Durbin said.
St. Ben's basketball is off to a good start

by Kathleen Smith

The College of St. Benedict's basketball team is 2-0 overall and 0-0 in the MAC. The team has shown some strong play and is looking forward to their MAC opponents.

The Blazer's opened up their season by hosting the Blazer/Holiday Inn Classic on Nov. 22 and 23. Cornell, Stevens Point and Upper Iowa were the teams that were invited.

In the first game of the tournament, St. Ben's defeated Upper Iowa 73-54. Junior center Matt Molitor led the Blazers with 22 points and 10 rebounds. Junior Kelly Mahlum added 15 points to also lead the Blazer's to victory.

In the championship game the Blazer's lost to UW Stevens Point 80-78. Freshman player Amy Mount led CSB with 21 points and Mahlum added 17 points and grabbed 12 rebounds for the team.

"The Blazer Classic went very well. I think everyone enjoyed themselves. We played as well as I expected," head coach Mike Durbin said.

Molitor missed the game against Stevens Point due to a prior commitment.

"So we were out 22 points from the night before, and we only lost by five points," Durbin said.

Dec. 10, 1991 The Independent
Blazer's looking to home-court advantage

by Kathleen Smith
Independent sports editor

The Blazer basketball team brought their record to 21-4 overall and 17-2, MIAC by defeating Gustavus 69-57 on Wednesday, Feb. 26, in Claire Lynch.

The win was the eighth one in a row for the College of St. Benedict's hoopsters. "We played poised. There was no chance for them to catch up," junior Glennis Werner said.

Junior Lynn Nielsen and first year student each had 16 points for the Blazers. Kampa also had five blocks while Nielsen pulled down 13 rebounds.

"The team played great together as a whole. Our defense was excellent," Nielsen said.

points while first year student Amy Mouat added 11. Mahlum lead the team with 11 rebounds.

The Blazers defeated Hamline and Bethel the week before. In the Hamline game juniors Kelly Mahlum and Janine Metting led the Blazers with 24 and 19 points respectively. Nielsen sank 12 of 12 rebounds.

The Blazers played their last regular season game on Saturday, Feb. 29, at St. Thomas. The Tommies no.1 in the MIAC and in the nation.

"We will just have to be optimistic in that game. We'll have to play tough defense and aggressive offense," Nielsen said.

The committee for tournament selection met last night to determine what teams would play each other and where.

"We will most likely play Concordia at Claire Lynch on Saturday, March 7," Coach Mike Durbin said.

The Blazer's have beaten Concordia twice in regular season play in very close games.

March 3, 1992 The Independent

1992-03-03, The Independent, p. 15
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchNews/id/3180
The campaign marked the fifth straight 20 win season for sixth year head coach Mike Durbin and the fourth straight trip to the NCAA Regionals. A satisfied Durbin remarked, "The year turned out really well. There is very good reason to be optimistic about next year, but we'll have to continue to work hard."

Much of this optimism stems from the unique composition of this year's team. Because there were no seniors on the roster, Durbin is in the enviable position of having his entire team returning for next season. "We tell our team that you're only as good as your senior class," he said "I guess this year we were only as good as our junior class."

The junior class that Durbin refers to consists of Kelly Mahlum, Lynn Nielsen, Janine Mettling, Sue Yorkovich, Amy Hergott, and Glennis Werner. Each will be counted on for senior leadership next year, as well as on-court production matching or exceeding this season.
1993 team photo from the CSB Archives
1993 team photo from the CSB Archives
Blazer basketball begins season ranked 2nd in nation

by Kathleen Smith
Independent co-editor

The College of St. Benilde's basketball team's season has begun differently than any other. The Blazers have been ranked no. two in the nation by the NCWAA.

"It is nice to see that our conference is beginning to be respected in the nation," head coach Mike Durbino said.

The women's teams in the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference have not been quiet during Durbino's six years at CSB. There have been two national champions and two runners-up.

Durbino is not going to let the national ranking affect the St. Benilde basketball team.

"As far as I am concerned it's just pre-season hype. We have 25 games to get concerned with before post-season play," Durbino said.

Durbino said that this schedule is probably the toughest ever that the Blazers have faced.

The season begins on Dec. 1, against the University of Wisconsin-River Falls. Their next game is against Wittenberg, Ohio. Wittenberg had the No. 1 defense in the nation last season.

This season will be highlighted with a trip to San Diego in December. The Blazers will participate in the UC-San Diego Surf & Slam Tournament. Durbino considers this tournament one of the best in Division II basketball.

"We have the potential of playing teams from the east, mid-west, and the west. It will give us a chance to see a balance of power," Durbino said.

The Blazer roster consists of 20 women, lead by the fabulous five seniors: Kelly Mahlum, Janine Metting, Lynn Nielsen, Amy Hergott, and Glennis Werner.

"I think we are going to be tough as well as exciting to watch," Werner said. "The seniors are doing exceptionally well. Their leadership will start this year since there were no seniors on the team. They are a special group of people," Durbino said.
The Blazer roster consists of 20 women, led by the fabulous five seniors: Kelly Mahlum, Janine Mettling, Lynn Nielsen, Amy Hergott, and Glennis Werner.

"I think we are going to be tough as well as exciting to watch," Werner said.
Blazers culminate season with Final Four berth

By Sheila Eldred
Staff Writer

The '97 Twins season was described as "unbelievable" and "incredible," a season which would never again be equaled in such a magical way. The '92-'93 Blazer basketball season equals the '97 Twins in its magic.

Everyone knows, or should know, what the Blazer basketball team has accomplished this year: undefeated in the MIAC, three wins over St. Thomas, several personal milestones, a trip to the Final Four. But just as Twins fans benefited from their winning season, so did we gain from the Blazers' success.

We were given the opportunity to watch an incredibly dedicated group of women perform to the best of their ability during every single game. We witnessed a team which is truly, as head coach Mike Durbin said, "a league of their own."

No one in Pella, Iowa, tried to make excuses last weekend when this team missed the chance to play for National champions by one point in the final few seconds of the game. Everyone knew the potential of this team, but they also knew that no team is invincible—although the Blazers have proven to be incredible.

They have proven this from the beginning of the season, with an impressive win at the San Diego Surf and Slam Tournament to the critical game against Concordia, March 13 which led the Blazers to the Final Four. The Concordia game was not only exhausting physically, but also emotionally. The team's undefeated season was put to the test one more time, and as the fans screamed "FINAL FOUR!" in the last minutes, everyone knew they were realizing their dream.

Both sophomore Tina Kampa and senior Kelly Mahlum were all-sectional. But this team was not based on one or two standouts. The fans realized this when each player climbed the ladder to collect a piece of the net which their ball had availed through—it was surprising to recognize so many names and faces who made up this team.

The Blazers graduated five players: Kelly Mahlum, Janine Mettling, Lynn Nilsen, Glen Werner, and Amy Hegott. These players were key both on and off the court—they included two captains, a singer of the National Anthem, a 1000 point career player, and a Scholar-Athlete of the Year.

Although it will be impossible to recapture the magic of the '97 season, the Blazers' depth in young players should carry them further than adequately through the next years: Sarah Kar, Stephanie Shug, Jill Lienski, Shelly Breen, and Sarah Mitchus showed their talent in the final minutes of the Concordia game when Durbin replaced the five seniors. This group still has two or three seasons to wear a Blazer uniform.

Fans supported the Blazers not only at sold-out home games, but the CSB/JU crowd in the Central College gym was loud enough to take the edge off the deafening cheers of the home team crowd.

It was easy to be a loyal fan without any disappointments throughout the entire season. After Central sunk a basket with four seconds left in Friday's game to lead the Blazers by one point, these fans were certainly stunned, but their faith in this team was unaltered. They screamed just as loudly the following night although the Blazers lost to Scranton (favored with the Blazers to play in the final game) by a margin of 20 points, the most they had ever been behind all season.

The magic of the Twins' unbelievable season ended with parades, trophies, and thousands of ecstatic Homer Hanky-waving fans, and the Blazers certainly deserve as much. They have been examples to athletes in every sport of how a true team can work together to achieve the extraordinary.

March 25, 1993 The Record
1993 Saints yearbook, p. 168
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/SJUArchives/id/44615
Group photo – 1993 Saints yearbook, p. 159
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/SJUArchives/id/44606
“Memories.” The Blazer’s 1992-1993 season is packed with them, and also the accomplishments that might never be equaled by St. Ben’s or any other team in the MIAC. St. Ben’s, buttressed by five seasoned, talented seniors, knew it had the tools to put together an exceptional season, but even the players and coaches might one day be awed by the magnitude of their achievements.

The Blazers were ranked number one in the nation for nearly all of the regular season. They finished 25-0 in the regular season, and their 20-0 record in the MIAC marked only the second time a team had ventured through its league schedule undefeated.

The Blazers essentially completed the transfer of power in the MIAC in the first round of the NCAA playoffs, whipping the 1991 national champion Tommies 78-65 to advance to the section tournament. They then went on to rip up Marymount University of Arlington, Va., 108-75 in the NCAA Division III version of the “Sweet Sixteen,” then completed their three-game sweep of Concordia, 84-57, to advance to the Final Four.

In the first round, St. Ben’s was heavily favored to win, but the old adage, “That’s why they play em!” rang true as they were defeated in a heartbreaker by Central College.

The next day, the Blazers played hard, but not particularly well and lost 89-69 to Scranton in the third-place game.

The spectacular season will always be remembered by those of us who were lucky to have been here to experience it. Time will never erase the memories of the 1992-1993 Blazers.
1993-03 Saint Benedict's Today Spring p.7
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchives/id/4970
Cover: http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchives/id/4964
Blazers finished 25-0 in the regular season, and their 20-0 record in the MIAC marked only the second time a team had ventured through its league schedule undefeated.
During a short ceremony before the team’s final regular-season game at Claire Lynch Hall against Gustavus, the five seniors — Mahlum, Mettling, Nielsen, Hergott and Glennis Werner — were feted by players and fans with kind words and small gifts for their contributions to the program.

Durbin then presented each of the seniors with a copy of a book that athletic director Carol Howe-Veenstra had given him last summer. It carried great meaning for him, he said, and he hoped it would for them.

Durbin handed them a copy of Zig Ziglar’s ‘See You At The Top,’ all the while knowing — tournaments, trophies and records aside — that they already were there.

Photo in the CSB Archives
Glennis Werner is a counselor for the Underwood School, Underwood, Minn. She assists seniors in their post graduation plans, as well as helping students with any personal or academic issues. Glennis is also the personal counselor at the Ashby School.

Saint Benedict's Today Spring 1994

Glennis Werner has a graduate degree in sport management and has an assistantship as a graduate adviser for NIU student housing, Dekalb, Ill.

Saint Benedict's Today Fall 1996

1994-03 Saint Benedict's Today Spring p.25
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchives/id/5123
1996-09 Saint Benedict's Today Fall p.41
http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchives/id/5365
She was the only woman on a team of six charged with completely transforming a facility rented from the American College of Greece into a workable training space for the U.S. athletes. They had 15 days, but planning the transformation took two-and-one-half years of hard work.

A typical day for Werner started at 7:30 a.m. and ended around 9 p.m., in 100 degree heat and extreme humidity. Since the Olympic schedule runs seven days a week, she never really got a full day off from July 25 to Sept. 2.
GIGGLE

It’s not all fun and games for Glen Werner Rueboom ’93, director of the United States Olympic Center in Colorado Springs.

There’s middle-of-the-night phone calls from international Olympic hopefuls wanting time in the aquatic center. Right now, she and her team are working out the logistics to recreate their 500-bed training facility in Beijing before July where they will be housing and caring for Olympians for a few months this summer. Oh, unfortunately, she’s there when, as she says, “People’s careers are ending. It’s not good.”

It’s the laughter that fuels her. “Laughter and excitement are important to me. Without a huge dose of it every day, I’m in trouble,” Glen said. “Giggling is what I do at work, with my two year old, and giggling is why I married my husband. If you enjoy the atmosphere and the people you work with, you will be wildly successful.”

Glen said this is the first time she’s been able to sit back and “simply enjoy being.” A year after graduation, she didn’t feel successful. Then, she was leaving in the Mezzanine in Claire Lynch during a Saint Ben’s basketball game in 1994 talking to then-Blazer-coach Jim McConnell about what she should do. His words changed her life: “Whatever you do, make sure you want to be knee-deep in it for the rest of your life.”

That moment of clarity was all she needed. Within two months, she’d taken her GRE and enrolled in a sports management program. The next twelve years
2008 January

GIGGLE

It's not all fun and games for Glen Werner Rooboom '93, director of the United States Olympic Center in Colorado Springs.

There's middle-of-the-night wanting time in the aquatic and the logistics to recreate their time to be as housing and care unfortunately, she's there who good.

It's the laughter that fuels. Without a huge dose of it every I do at work, with my two year old. If you enjoy the atmosphere there is.

Glen said this is the first time she's been able to sit back and simply enjoy being. A year after graduation, she didn't feel successful. Then, she was leaning in the Mezzanine in Claire Lynch during a Saint Ben's basketball game in 1994 talking to then-Basketball Jim McConnell about what she should do. His words changed her life: "Whatever you do, make sure you want to be knee-deep in it for the rest of your life." That moment of clarity was all she needed. Within two months, she had her GRE and enrolled in a sports management program. The next twelve years

The biggest challenge she sees others facing in life is finding balance. "This is the right spot for me because I have a beautiful balance. I love being at home, and I love being at work," she said. "That's what passion looks like to me. I don't need mental health days."

Glen said if giggling at work isn't in your immediate future, there are other things you can do. "The Saint Ben's 'hello,'" she suggested without pause. "Let's start with that and make people feel welcome each day."
1993
The United States Olympic Committee announced in August the promotion of Glennis Werner Roseboom to director of the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center. Glennis has been affiliated with the Colorado Springs center since 1997. A board member and Team Captain of the Pikes Peak Women’s Hockey Foundation, Roseboom was also Assistant Coach for the Colorado College Women’s Basketball program from 1998-2003. She was a 1993 Division III basketball Final Four participant for the College of Saint Benedict and a two-time varsity team captain.

Glennis Werner-Roseboom was part of the management team for the Olympic team’s High Performance Training Center in Beijing.
Going for the gold
Glennis Werner Roseboom '93, Presidents' Award

After a long stint as director of the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center, Glennis is tackling a new playing field as an executive at the VillaSport Athletic Club and Spa.

During her tenure with the Olympic Training Center, Glennis was selected for staff assignments at five consecutive Olympic Paralympic Games, both summer and winter. She also served as an adjunct professor in the sport management graduate program at the University of Alabama, as well as in the undergraduate program at the University of Colorado—Colorado Springs.

She also completed a two-year Olympic Sport Leadership Certification Program with the Kellogg Center for Nonprofit Management at Northwestern University and she started a competitive women's hockey team. Throughout her career — and her life — Glennis endeavors to live with the values with which she was raised and which Saint Ben's reinforced.
A many college graduates learn, post-graduation plans don’t always unfold as expected. Glenna Werner Roseboom (CSB ’73), recently named the new Athletic Director at CSB, has been no exception. Her returning path to CSB has been a long one.

Werner Roseboom, a Cannon Falls, Minnesota native, graduated from CSB with a degree in social work. After graduation, she managed to land her dream job as a school counselor and girls’ basketball coach in Underwood, Minnesota.

But then tragedy struck the small community. A student died in a car accident, and it was then that Werner Roseboom realized she was out of her element.

“I just became overwhelmed.”

Werner Roseboom said, “I was 23 years old and trying to recover a community from a massive grief event. I thought to myself, ‘Yes, I can do this, but is what cost to myself emotional?’

In the end, Werner Roseboom decided the cost was too great and began pursuing a master’s degree in sports management.

> See GLEN Page 6

Previous CSB athlete thrilled

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ABOUT GLEN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>From Cannon Falls, Minnesota</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Currently resides in Colorado</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1993 CSB graduate</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Previous CSB basketball player and crew team president</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Has attended six Olympic and Paralympic games</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Has one daughter</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

February 6, 2015, The Record, p.1

http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchNews/id/42694
From page 1

After receiving her degree, she was hired at the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center as a residence life coordinator. She gradually worked her way to scheduling coordinator, operations manager, associate director and finally director. As the director, Werner Roseboom attended six Olympic and Paralympic games to execute training and competition plans for athletes.

"Sports just grabbed my attention," Werner Roseboom said. "It was my niche. When I landed the job at the training center, it was like I had died and gone to heaven."

Currently serving as the assistant general manager at the 12,000-member Villasport Athletic Club & Spa in Colorado Springs, Colorado, Werner Roseboom's responsibilities include supervising the management team, overseeing office repairs and managing a $70 million annual budget.

Although she has built a life in Colorado, her parents moved there, her daughter was born there and she served as a founding member of a women's hockey team, Minnesota has always been her home.

"There's just something special about Minnesota," Werner Roseboom said. "I want to move to a small town like where I grew up, I want my daughter to experience that. Giving her this experience will be as thrilling as working at CSB itself."

Werner Roseboom is no stranger to CSB, especially in the department of Blazer athletics. During her collegiate career, she was a four-year member of the basketball team and took part in four consecutive trips to the NCAA Division III National Tournament. During her senior year, Werner Roseboom was part of the team that won 28 consecutive games and competed in the NCAA Division III Final Four, a team which resides in the CSB Hall of Fame.

She also resides in a Hall of Fame of her own, having served as the first female president of the crew team and leading the group in fundraising nearly $80,000.

"[Being a former Blazer] means that my work becomes very precious," Werner Roseboom said. "There's a saying that 'it's not personal, its business.' But to me, business has always been very personal. Being able to care for people at work and being able to return the favor to hundreds of other women means so much. It's no longer just business, it's absolutely personal."

Werner Roseboom's new position is effective July 1. She was selected by a search committee made up of members from all departments of CSB, and was one of two finalists chosen from over 70 applicants. She will be replacing current athletic director Carol Howe-Veenstra, who, in October 2016, announced her retirement after 20 years in the Blazer athletic department.

Replacing Howe-Veenstra in terms of expertise and experience is no easy task, but Werner's soon-to-be coworkers have faith in her abilities.

"The Blazer Athletic department is strong, healthy and is recognized both at the conference and national levels," said Nicole Hess, assistant athletic director at CSB. "We are excited to continue the tradition that has been in place under Carol's leadership. Glen's passion for women's athletics and St. Benedict is inspiring. She will be an excellent advocate.

Feb. 6, 2015, The Record, p.1

http://cdm.csbsju.edu/cdm/ref/collection/CSBArchNews/id/42694
GLEN
From page 1

After receiving her degree, she was hired at the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center as a residence life coordinator. She gradually worked her way to scheduling coordinator, operations manager, associate director and finally director. As the director, Werner Roseboom attended six Olympic and Paralympic games to execute training and competition plans for athletes.

“I’d be lying if I said I wasn’t nervous,” Werner Roseboom said. “Carol is a legacy to me. It’s as daunting as anything to really be able to connect with people the way she has. Thank goodness I’m an athlete and like a challenge.”

Although she has built a life in Colorado (her parents moved there), her daughter was born there and she served as a fundraising member of a women’s hockey team. Minnesota has always been her home.

“Then’s just something special about Minnesota,” Werner Roseboom said. “I want brutal winters, I want to move to a small town like where I grew up, I want my daughter to experience that. Giving her this experience will be as thrilling as working at CSB itself.”

Werner Roseboom is no stranger to CSB, especially in the department of Blazer athletics. During her collegiate career, she was a four-year member of the basketball team and took part in four consecutive trips to the NCAA Division II National Tournament. During her senior year, Werner Roseboom was part of the team that won 28 consecutive games and competed in the NCAA Division II Final Four – a team which resides in the CSB Hall of Fame.

She also resides in a hall of fame of her own, having served as the first female president of the new team, and leading the group in fundraising nearly $30,000.

“(Being a former Blazer) means that my work becomes very precious,” Werner Roseboom said. “There’s a saying that ‘It’s not personal, its business’ but to me, business has always been very personal. Being able to care for people at work and being able to return the favor to hundreds of other women means so much. It’s no longer just business, it’s absolutely personal.”

Werner Roseboom’s new position is effective July 1. She was selected by a search committee made up of members from all departments of CSB, and was one of two finalists chosen from over 70 applicants. She will be replacing current athletic director Carol Howe-Wennstrom, who, in October 2014, announced her retirement after 20 years in the Blazer athletic department.

Replacing Howe-Wennstrom in terms of expertise and experience is no easy task, but Werner’s knowledgeable coworkers have faith in her abilities.

“The Blazer Athletic department is strong, healthy and is recognized both at the conference and national levels,” said Nicole Hess, assistant athletic director at CSB. “We are excited to continue the tradition that has been in place under Carol’s leadership. Glen’s passion for women’s athletics and St. Benedict is inspiring. She will be an excellent advocate.”
CSB Alumna Named Athletic Director

Glennis Werner, class of 1993, has been named the new CSB athletic director, and will begin this position July 1. Glen will replace Carol Howe-Veenstra, who is retiring after 30 years in the Blazer athletic department.

For the past two years, Glen has been the assistant general manager at the VillaSport Athletic Club and Spa in Colorado Springs, Colo. In her position at the 12,000-member facility, she oversaw the management team, handled building repairs and developed strategic plans while overseeing a $10 million annual budget. Before that, she worked at the Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center. As the director, Glen oversaw facility operations and attended six Olympic and Paralympic games to help execute training and competition plans. She also helped raise $16 million for facility construction and renovation.

“I hope to find new and interesting ways to bring the campus community together and for Blazer student athletes to connect into larger circles of campus and community life,” explains Glen. “I cannot wait to see what lies ahead for the student athletes at Saint Ben’s.”

The entire CSB community is happy to welcome Glen home!
Werner feels at home in St. Joseph

Glen Werner, the new CSB athletic director, returns to her Blazer roots in the front office

By Emily McGough
email: emilymcgough@stb.com

For many St. Ben and St. Ben’s students, the campus has become home. Homecoming marks a point in the year where time seems to stop, and seniors are beginning their long list of "just facts." Glen Werner, a 1993 graduate of CSB, will be celebrating her first Homecoming as St. Ben’s Athletic Director. She follows in the footsteps of Carol Rouse, a veteran who was head of the department for three decades. Even though it has been 22 years, CSB will feel like home for Werner.

Emily McGough: What has it been like to follow Carol in this position?

Glen Werner: It’s been very special for me. Replacing someone one after 39 years makes you want to begin to think like you have to pick up right where they left off. And that’s the pressure of that level right away. That can be a recipe for not a lot of success right away. It has been more like learning the crazy and always getting back to learning and being mindful. Not unlike what you guys are trying to do. EM: How has your first season back been with us?

GW: I would probably describe it as a million ways. There is the pace of coming home was exactly what I thought it would be, it’s just fascinating. It’s so familiar, but St. Ben’s has really evolved in 22 years. Then there’s the expected.

EM: And what’s that?

GW: It’s an organizational that tries to connect business with the business people. We aren’t producing things, we are producing people. Our job is to provide you with what you think you need to move on.

EM: How has the coaching staff and players been helping your transition back to CSB?

GW: That’s probably the best part of the journey. I knew I wanted to apply for the job in October and received the offer in February and didn’t start here until June, that was huge and it’s to what it is going to be like.

Now I’m interviewing candidates for our first coaching position and I can confidently tell them that the welcome I received day one is still the welcome I receive every morning. This is a warm environment, this community is welcoming all the time.

EM: There really is something to be said about the community here, isn’t there?

GW: It’s really an understated value. Everyone in the MAAC talks about community, everyone talks about that camp’s great atmosphere. But we deliver every day with passion, diligence and just excitement. I’ve been welcomed and so has my daughter as well as my parents like nothing I have ever experienced.

EM: And all this is after you left for about 20 years?

GW: We went back to Colorado after the interview, which is a great place, but it simply wasn’t different. Now that we’re here, it’s like why would you want to live here? It’s just a little older.

EM: So it really feels like coming home?

GW: Absolutely.